Introduction:

Quotes and Notes

"These three experiences seemed like natural phenomena (wind, fire and speech); yet they were supernatural both in origin and in character. The noise was not wind, but sounded like it; the sight was not fire but resembled it; and the speech was in languages which were not ordinary but in some way 'other'. Again, three of their higher senses were affected, in that they heard the wind-like sound, saw the fire-like apparition and spoke the 'other' languages. Yet what they experienced was more than sensory; it was significant. So they sought to understand it. 'What does this mean?' the people later asked (12). If we allow other parts of Scripture to guide our interpretation, it seems that these three signs at least represented the new era of the Spirit which had begun (John the Baptist had bracketed wind and fire) and the new work which he had come to do. If so, the noise like wind may have symbolized power (such as Jesus had promised them for witness, Lk. 24:49; Acts 1:8), the sight like fire purity (like the live coal which cleansed Isaiah, 6:6-7) and the speech in other languages the universality of the Christian church. In what follows nothing more is said about the phenomena like wind and fire; Luke concentrates on the third, the languages."

John Stott (1921-2011), The Message of Acts

"Beginning with the apostles, [Luke] attributes two things to them, which they received by the operation of the Holy Spirit. The first is that by and by, after they had received the Holy Spirit, they began to speak with strange and diverse tongues. This is so great and wonderful a miracle, as I know not whether ever there happened a greater among people. For who is ignorant how much labor and industry is even from our childhood to learn diverse tongues? We see that people grown in years are scarcely able to learn any one tongue, and the perfect use thereof. But the apostles, unlearned men of mature age, who spent their childhood and youth not in the study of learning but in handy occupations, even in a moment became notable and excellent in the knowledge and use not of one tongue, or two, but of all tongues at once. Who here acknowledges not the evident work of God? Who reverences not the operation of the Holy Spirit? For what could the industry or dexterity of a person's wit have done in so short a time?"

-Rudolf Gwalther (1519-1586), Homelyes or Sermons upon the Acts

"In Christ, there is neither Greek nor Jew (Galatians 3:28). In Ephesians 2:14ff, Paul explains that the cross removes the pride and self-aggrandizement that leads to racial animosity and human disunity. Now the church is to show the world how in Christ the lost community of humanity can be recovered. We are to be an 'alternate city' of God (Matthew 5:14-17) in the midst of every 'City of Man,' showing the unity of persons across culture and race and class barriers that only Christ can bring [3]. And finally, some day, the curse will be totally gone. 'In that day I will change the speech of the peoples to a pure speech, that all may call on the name of the Lord, and serve him together' (Zephaniah 3:9)."

- Tim Keller, "The Bible and Race"
