Quotes and Notes

"It should be noted that the blessings in this chapter are not magical formulas spoken for good; neither are the curses magical formulas spoken for evil. Instead, the blessings and curse describe the actions of a personal God towards those who either embrace his covenant from the heart or reject it...The contrast between the sections could not be clearer and serves to emphasize a theme found throughout Scripture: the posture we take before the Lord determines whether we experience blessing or cursing. And although this chapter is focused on that experience in the here and now, it is equally true for our experience in the world to come (cf. Matt. 7:21-27)."

- Jay Sklar, Leviticus

"To be part of God's covenant people, to belong to God, is to be blessed. To be out of relationship with God is to be cursed. The curses are equally presented in materialistic terms (as were the blessings), but it does not appear that they were ever intended to be applied in a mechanistic way, with a one-to-one relationship to individual lawbreaking. They are there to show the Israelites that God must be taken seriously, that turning away from God's will for them will have devastating consequences, that being 'outside Yahweh' is a terrible state, to be avoided at all costs. But just as the blessing in fact rests on God's promise and is not portrayed as a reward for keeping the law, so the curse is not, strictly speaking, a punishment for not keeping the law, but a description of the consequences of being outside of God's blessing."

- Mary Evans, "Plague on Both Your Houses"

"We are, not metaphorically but in very truth, a Divine work of art, something that God is making, and therefore something with which He will not be satisfied until it has a certain character. Here again we come up against what I have called the "intolerable compliment." Over a sketch made idly to amuse a child, an artist may not take much trouble: he may be content to let it go even though it is not exactly as he meant it to be. But over the great picture of his life—the work which he loves, though in a different fashion, as intensely as a man loves a woman or a mother a child—he will take endless trouble—and would doubtless, thereby give endless trouble to the picture if it were sentient. One can imagine a sentient picture, after being rubbed and scraped and re-commenced for the tenth time, wishing that it were only a thumb-nail sketch whose making was over in a minute. In the same way, it is natural for us to wish that God had designed for us a less glorious and less arduous destiny; but then we are wishing not for more love but for less."

— C. S. Lewis (1898-1963), The Problem of Pain

We are really glad you could be with us this morning. If you have any questions, please don't hesitate to ask our pastor or one of the elders. They would be glad to help you in any way they can.
